

What's been going on in the prep art program?

We have been learning about how Jackson Pollock used movement and drippy paint to make his contemporary art works on large-scale canvases, which he placed on the floor.

We had a go, working in teams, taking turns, using hot or cold colours.

Some big kids from Hayley's 5-6 class came to art to help us out with this messy and fun project.

(The big kids did not miss out on the fun, they got to have a go on the reverse of the boards at lunchtime so the school and the public can enjoy these works simultaneously.)

Mean while Ahri's dad Micky visited prep E with his hammers and nails. We had such a great time building our sculptures with wood , bottle tops, cardboard, sheep skin off cuts and old bike tubes. Micky said he would be happy to come again so maybe in arts week we have a hammering lunchtime! These sculptures will be painted this week.
